Computer-Electronic Accommodations Program (CAP)

The Computer-Electronic Accommodations Program (CAP) is a Department of Defense resource for acquiring assistive technology and services to provide accommodations for civilian employees with disabilities and/or wounded Soldiers who may have a need for this service.

CAP's mission is to provide real solutions for real needs, in part, by helping the federal government become the model employer for people with disabilities. Working closely with federal agencies, CAP assists in the recruitment, placement, promotion, and retention of people with disabilities by providing work-related accommodations to the agency free of charge.
